

AURA DOUBLE HANGING LIGHT

Raw-edged beauty.

Hand-sculpted and finished, the piece reflects the direct imprint of the maker's hand. Its surface carries subtle imperfections – irregularities that give the form texture and presence within a space.

Formed from a resin mould, the light is shaped and refined through a manual process that emphasises variation over uniformity. Its asymmetry introduces a sense of movement, shifting in perception depending on angle and light.

Up to four layers of polymer plaster are applied by hand, building a textured finish that softens the form while retaining its sculptural edge. The result is an off-white surface that diffuses light gently, allowing both material and form to remain visible.
