

ROMAN BOWL

Moulded from the earth.

Undulating curves and an expansive shape signify the unique silhouette of this hand-pressed concrete bowl. A piece of art that challenges perceived functionality – for storing overflowing collections of freshly plucked citrus, or standing on its own.

Cast from hand-pressed concrete, the bowl is applied with a plaster finish to all sides. Irregular brushstrokes and a dabbing technique add textural depth to the piece, while the off-white colouring aids in exaggerating the sheer scale.
